Hi Max,
Having reviewed the additional information you have submitted and discussed it with the Conservation Officer it is noted that you have not confirmed if the glazing bars will be integral or applied to the glass. Can you let me know as soon as possible please.
Thanks
Anita

Dear Anita,

Thanks for the email.

The window will be joinery quality timber construction with laminated glass. The parting beads will be timber bevelled to match the sash detail to the front of the property.

My client will continue with the facing masonry as shown on the application. There is a miss match (3 different types of brick) across the rear elevation. They plan on using a darker brick to the upper parts of the addition. See photos attached. A brick in similar style and appearance as a Wienerberger Cassandra multi stock will be used. Owing to the small amount of facing brickwork, it would be best to lay in a stretcher bond but are happy to consider a Flemish bond if that is your preference.

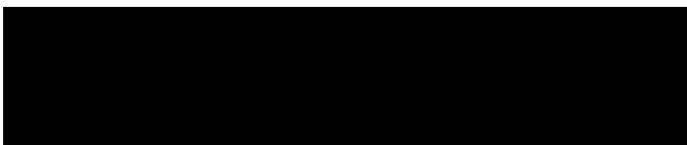

I hope this answers your queries.

Kind Regards,

Max

Dear Mr Thoms,

I am e-mailing you in respect of the above approval of details reserved by condition imposed under ref AB/125/20/L relating to Condition Nos 3 - details of junction between elevation of extension & flat roof including materials, 4 - materials & finishes for brick & brick bond, 5 - details of new external door including materials, finish & method of glazing, 6 - materials & finishes for rooflight and 7 - details of internal window including proposed glazing

In respect of condition 7 it would help to have further information regarding the interior window: what will the glazing bars look like? Will they be integral or applied to the frame?

I also note that the intention is to revise the treatment of the small areas either side of the rear elevation door from brick to render and use the same paint colour as already present on the listed building. Whilst this approach is likely to be acceptable, it can't be submitted as discharge of condition application since the treatment of the wall was detailed on the approved plans and there are no conditions relating to submission of render for approval. In order to make this change a new application for Listed Building Consent will need to be submitted for consideration.

Regards
Anita Gardner
