Hi Joel

Thank you for your email.

I suggest you instruct your project arboricultural consultant to attend site and consider your requirements. They can clarify the obligations you have under the approved Arboricultural Method Statement and Tree Protection Plan and make appropriate recommendations.

Any deviations from the approved report and plan will need to be first agreed with the planning department and I would be happy to discuss any revisions with you and your consultant at that time.

The distressed and leaning tree in your photographs does not appear to be subject of a TPO but could be identified for retention as part of the scheme. In any event, if it presents an immediate risk of serious harm to persons or property, you are entitled to make it safe or fell to ground level. Again, your project arboriculturist can assist with interpreting the approved tree protection plan.

I am sorry I cannot be of direct assistance on this occasion.

Kind regards,

Mark Warwick

Hi Mark I have tried to contact you on a few occasions i'm the site manager for imperial homes down at aldingbourne, hook lane, po203TE.

I am aware we have tree protection in place, I am getting to the stage on site now where I need to start doing the back gardens, some of the back Garden's on site go beyond the tree protection, I was wondering if you are able to make a site visit so we can discuss what I can and can't do beyond tree protection ie which machinery can be used if any.

We also have a tree of concerned which is in tree protection, the tree has started to fall towards properties next to our site (please see attached picture), our concern is if the tree completely goes it has the potential to damage properties or potentially harm someone, are we able to go in and remove this tree

Kind Regards,

Joel harris
