Dear Nicola, further to your email and attached letter requesting additional information I can advise that:

1. The block plan, as this is for a use of land for the siting of a caravan for use as additional accommodation, with no operational development, as such there is no necessity for the provision of measurements to the boundary. This information is irrelevant to the assessment of lawfulness as the twin unit mobile home could in fact be placed anywhere within the residential planning unit without resulting in operational development.
2. The CIL form submitted via the planning portal is complete, as can be seen from the items attached which includes the original form and the zip file of all documents transferred to the local planning authority.

As such please confirm that the application was valid from the date of the payment of the application fee.

Kind regards

Rebecca Lord MSc MRTPI
