Dear James,

I'm working from home at the moment.

With regard to the above application, I accept the felling of the Horse Chestnut (now diseased and beyond recovery) and reduction of the 'leggy' Poplar tree. The English Oak is asymmetric having grown in close proximity to the Ash and Beech and would consider these as a 'Group' where the English Oak should be retained and not felled. The loss of the Horse Chestnut should be replaced with another suitable tree to be planted at an appropriate distance from the dominant Poplar tree.

Yours sincerely
Ian Brewster
