Dear Mrs. Smith,

Large Pine Tree.

Further to your concerns about the safety of the mature monterey pine opposite the east side of your property.

I have made a casual inspection of the tree and did not observe any major defects likely to be a safety issue apart from a large, dead bough on the west sector which ought to be removed. Pruning of the upper branches to minimise overhang of your patio area has been carried out in the past and I suggest that this could be repeated to prevent increasing problems from falling cones and other debris. Removing about 1m of new growth from the previous pruning points should be sufficient and will not adversely affect crown balance.
