As a wife of a disabled person I really must protest at the possible of Morrison's taking over the historic Ship Inn in Aldwick. This will take away a pleasant amenity to be replaced by yet another food store which is not required. He is reliant on me to take him to most places but the present Ship Inn is easily accessible for him to go alone, and enjoy a sociable drink with other diners. We don't need extra stress caused by noise or the constant traffic and more so noise from freezers etc. This is unfair for the nearby residents who have enjoyed for all these years undisturbed days and nights, and have lived in a pleasant area. Also the local shop across the road who has serviced this area with food, papers etc for 25 years also having lost the post office. Many of the residents we have spoken to are horrified at the prospect of crossing the road nearby with no footpath.

Morrison's signs are not welcome in this area. The people opposite who have lived there for many years do not want constant light entering their houses, apart from the fact that signs are ugly and intrusive.
