Dear Mr. Taylor,

Mature Lime Tree.

Further to your concerns about the safety of the lime tree and the fact that it casts extensive shade over the back garden.

The tree is a healthy specimen about 19m in height and with a maximum crown spread of 12m approx. Growth form is well balanced and typical of the species. The base of the tree is about 10m from the building line. No defects were observed but there is a small proportion of dead branch wood aloft. Your wish to contain the tree could be achieved, without spoiling the amenity aspect, by reducing height by 4m and crown spread by 2m thus leaving a well-shaped tree about 15m tall, with a crown spread of 10m.

Yours sincerely,

Stuart Power.
