COMPARISON BETWEEN THE HOTELS

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

I have been to both the Russell Hotel and the Bradbury Hotel and my Findings are these:

The Bradbury is much smaller than the Russell. It is ideal for any person who may be infirmed. The Staff are very good, understanding and know what they are about. The room I stayed in was upstairs and was not a good design for a Blind person. It was en suite and had a Shower but when one opened the Bathroom door, there was a step which one had to go up before stepping down into the shower - one could easily fall over this step on opening the Bathroom door.

The Bradbury Hotel does not have any swimming facilities at all. Anmering is not as good as Bognor Regis for finding one's way around

I would never go there again alone because one needs a sighted guide. I don't know what the transport situation is but I do know that one can get off a Bus outside the Russell Hotel.

The Russell Hotel can accommodate many more clients because it is so much bigger. There is a wonderful swimming pool which clients and other members of the General public can enjoy. The En Suite rooms are much better than those of the Bradbury. I don't know if the Bradbury has walk-in showers, but the Russell does.

If I had to say which Hotel should close, I would definitely say THE BRADBURY! Please consider what I have told you because it would make so much difference if Blind and Vision-impaired people could go to the RUSSELL Hotel because the town is much easier to get to as is the seafront.

I and many other people will be overjoyed if You keep The Russell; it holds so many happy memories for Me and my lovely Husband before he passed away ten Years
