ALL ASPECTS OF TREE SURGERY AND HEDGE CUTTING

After assessing Both (T1) and (T2) I have advised that we apply to remove the Horse Chestnut (T2) and reduce the larger Oak (T1) which stands around 12-13m in height with a spread of 10-12m. This is to enable (T1) to fill out on the side of (T2) and also stops (T2) from suppressing further into (T1) which will in time start to compete for crown space and potentially damage limbs. By also reducing (T1) by approx 2-2.5m this will bring the long outgrowing limbs away from the house and prevent any snapping of branches, in turn resulting in the tree being a nicely balanced and shaped tree standing around 10m in height with a spread of around 8-9m.
