Dear Sir

Re Planning Application AW 46/13

I noticed in The Bognor Regis Observer last Thursday the above planning application. From the amount of rubble, bricks etc. that have been removed from this address over the past weeks, it appears that perhaps they haven't waited for permission to be granted. I have heard of other such instances where work has been done and then retrospective planning permission is applied for. If this is the case then it makes a mockery of planning applications.

Another point – when permission is given for major alterations is it possible to indicate a time limit for completion? There are several major developments taking place at various points on this Estate which have been going on for months and appear to still need many more months at the present rate of building with the consequent mess of rubble etc. around.

Yours sincerely,

Jean Garrard
