Hi Charlotte,

We have updated the FRA to try and take account of your comments as included with in your previous email (see below). Attachments to follow as separate We transfer.

In short, we feel, that now we have heavily referred to the updated SFRA information throughout the report, which does appear to complicates matters. Hence, we have now removed sections to simplify the narrative relating to our specific site.

In relation to the infiltration. We have stated in the report, that we have completed the current design taking no account of soakage. If, following site investigation, it is deemed that infiltration devices will be suitable, no matter how poor the rate. We will look to include within the design. This will in theory provide surplus attenuation. Combined with significant betterment against the existing greenfield runoff rates, we feel will be beneficial.

Kind Regards,

Gareth Wilby

Hi Karen

Thanks for providing this along with the track change comments version.

Unfortunately there are a number of the points that remain. In particular you will see that although I may have highlighted in some other areas as well that there is a need for the wider benefits to the sub-region, as well as any business case to be reinforced. Previously this was included on page 13. This should be drawn out and emphasised more considering the role/contribution that it is intended this will be making more widely.

I hope that the comments are reasonably self-explanatory and there are definitely a few insertions or alterations in there as well to try and help as much as possible. As I have referred to an Appendix from our Strategic Surface Water Management Study in one of the last comments I have attached this as well.

Kind Regards
