Safeguarding and the proposed Clare Court development (BN/16/22/PL)

From the rear upstairs windows of the proposed four houses which would be built on the border with the school grounds of St Philip Howard School, Barnham, there is a clear and close view of the students in the school grounds. This poses a major safeguarding issue. That this certainly does constitute a safeguarding issue can be seen from the case, some years back, of a paedophile priest who chose to live in a house which directly overlooked the playing field of a primary school in Deal, Kent, an arrangement which was only ended when it was exposed in national newspapers by investigative journalists. This sort of risk to the safety of young people is therefore a matter of record, and must be taken very seriously, and the application to build these four houses in such a sensitive position should be refused by the Arun Planning Authority on safeguarding grounds.
