Dear Hilary,

Having picked up the keys to my new home (38, Nightingale Lane, Barnham PO22 0DL) a few short weeks ago, I am now looking forward to taking up residence now that my existing home has almost been sold.

What a shock I received on Monday when I learned of the revised plans of the nearby Redrow site which is currently taking shape. I was always told by my builder (Croudace Homes) that the small thicket and row of tall trees at the rear of my house would remain in tact, and that the new (Redrow) site would be built sympathetically up to this line.

According to the revised plans plot 71 seems to be a 'plot too far', nudging hard up against the said boundary line. Also, and more importantly, it appears that it might even be a three storey property !

Surely, the sight line needs to be considered. We should NOT be overlooked ! Take for example the row of bungalows opposite my property in Nightingale Lane. These were built by Croudace in sympathy with the bungalows to the rear of them.

Your comments by return would be much appreciated.

Regards,
