Hi David,

Our site manager responds with the following:

"We have myself here and an assistant site manager, between us we carry out the sound monitoring using the handheld monitor or the smart apps on our phones. Monitoring is carried out several times a week especially when we are using some of the louder type power tools and we do this within the building and also from several locations outside the site boundary. Both the handheld meters and apps we are able to calibrate ourselves on site. In the event of excessive noise we will take the appropriate measures to deal with and reduce this."

Kind regards,

Shannon Meredith | Architectural Designer

Hi Shannon,

Please see the reply I received from Environmental Health:

'The responses are satisfactory, although I would please like to know how often and from which locations the noise and vibration monitoring will be conducted, whether the sound level meters will be calibrated, whether the operatives have (or will have) received suitable training and what measures will be in place should excessive measurements of noise or vibration be recorded'.

I look forward to hearing from you.

With regards,

David Spring B.Sc, M.Sc, M.A
