Dear Simon,

Thank you for forwarding your engineer's comments and I have passed it on to our engineer for comment.

However, I have to say that I am very disappointed that the fundamental principle of the voids under the buildings is being questioned only now when they have been proposed since the application was resubmitted last year! Why is it that every time we respond to the comments, the goalposts seem to move yet again. Our clients have invested in the percolation testing to overcome the last comments and now other matters we thought were satisfied are being raised! The percolation testing has shown what can be accommodated under the access road and parking areas which more than compensates for the new development so the structures to be removed are no longer important. Something that does not appear to be recognised by your engineer.

I am at a loss where we go from here and await further advice from our engineer.

Regards

Dawn
