Hi Nicky

I have done further research on this since writing yesterday and have found excellent advice from the Arboricultural Association which I feel I can now promote my response from to your question.

The intention is to Crown Lift the tree to remove some lower branches on the side just within my garden. There are about 14 branches/secondary branches which point down to the ground and not level or up. The purpose is to increase light transmission to areas closer to the tree and also to under the crown. On assessment of the tree I consider this will amount to less than 10% of branches/secondary branches raising the crown to give some 3m clear below the crown in winter (no leaves).

I hope that address your request and I have been very specific about what I want to remove. If you need a full written response by letter please come back to me.

Dear Richard

Thank you for your email.

You will need to speak to a Tree Surgeon/Specialist who will be able to advise you. Unfortunately, I am unable to advise a name/company.

Kind Regards

Dear Nicola Moore

Thank you for your email today asking for a comment on the percentage removal of the proposed Crown Thinning to a tree in my back garden.

I will need to take expert advice on this to give you the correct figures so can you advise please as to who I should seek this from, in terms of their professional ability and expertise.

I do not need a name but can you confirm as to who I should go to get this done.any thanks
