Hi Abbey,

Nick has replied to say that he has reviewed the submitted information again and has consulted the DEFRA guidance which states that such a premises would create high level of grease and odour. He says that on his initial review of the information, he could see that the baffle filters which predominantly are there to remove grease and smoke would, if working and cleaned effectively, reduce the level of grease in the canopy and duct work and hence any odour/gases would be vented through the flue at height above the roof eaves. However, the baffle filters on their own would not be able to address the odour itself. Therefore, he considers that additional controls are required to deal with the odour e.g. pre-filters and carbon, ozone neutraliser, ESP and Ozone etc.

We can either resolve this through the condition as forwarded previously or you can submit further details now.

Kind Regards

Simon,

I'm little confused has this not been provided?

As the EHO has approved the scheme lower down and is now requesting further information that we have provided?

Wouldn't we just be providing the same information that we have already provided?

Hi Simon and Nick,

Please find attached and below information in regards to fryer and ventilations details,

'The kitchen ventilation does not contain odour filtration and so does not have a dwell time for odour catchment. The filters within the kitchen canopy are inclined baffle type to provide grease capture and to prevent flame carryover in to the extract ductwork.'

Let me know if you require anything else,

Regards,
