

If the sole member owns or controls the company, the company is treated as a disregarded entity for tax purposes. If the sole member is an individual, the company's income is reported on the owner's personal tax return. If the sole member is a corporation, the company's income is reported on the corporation's tax return. If the sole member is a partnership, the company's income is reported on the partnership's tax return. If the sole member is a trust, the company's income is reported on the trust's tax return. If the sole member is an estate, the company's income is reported on the estate's tax return. If the sole member is a partnership, the company's income is reported on the partnership's tax return. If the sole member is a trust, the company's income is reported on the trust's tax return. If the sole member is an estate, the company's income is reported on the estate's tax return.

revision
a - 01.09.17 - fenestration updates.
b - 23.10.17 - reduction in extension to unit 2 at request of the lpa

```
client
mr hote

stage
planning

date
oct 2016

scale
1:100 @ A1
```

address
kents yard
crookthorne lane
climping
littlehampton
bn17 5qu

drawing no.
293/10/08

drawing
proposed plans

CMC design architectural services

