Evidence	DEMOLISHED BUILDING

Description and Sources

Description

The church of Islesham, an extinct parish, dissappeared either by deliberate demolition or slow decay. As the churchyard would have remained vicarage glebe except in the unlikely event of an exchange, until the time of the Tithe Award, two possible parcels of land appear to suit: (i) That lying N. of parcel 152 having between it and the road a field with the name of 'Little Bread (Holybreadths)' (at TQ004-018-A). (ii) The small piece of glebe lying S. of 141, containing 1 rood 35p (at TQ008-017-A).{1}

The last suggestion is confirmed by the Dunkin MSS dated 1635 which refers to this piece of Glebe as 'Chappell Garden' in the occupation of Mr John White, vicar of Climping.{2}

No trace of an ecclesiastical building are to be found at either site. No further information could be obtained in 1962.{3}

'Chappell Garden' is shown on the Tithe Map.{4} For Islesham DMV see 2193.ü

INDUSTRIAL BUILDING (Post Medieval - 1800 AD to 1899 AD)

Evidence DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

Description and SourcesDescription

Climping Shipyard - boatbuilding and repair yard of Hillyard and Osborne, where in the last century vessels of up to 600 tons were built. It was laid out in 1839, and the two-storeyed building with half-hipped roof housed the steam sawmill. The machinery for a ropewalk was located in the building at the NW. corner.{1}

WRECK (Wrecked, Unknown date)
Evidence STRUCTURE

Description and SourcesDescription

A wooden vessel approx. 12.0m x 4.5m lies roughly parallel to the shore at OS Grid ref TQ 0210 0090. Some of the timbers are 'spongy' and evidently waterlogged, whilst others feel quite firm. Seventeen frames, probably floor timbers, are visible on the landward side of the wreck. A nail hole c. 40-50mm (possibly a trenail hole) was found in one frame, two frames are visible on the seaward side of the wreck. A squared off timber with a flat upper surface protrudes at the eastern end of the wreck and measures c. 32.5cm across (this could be the top of a Keelson, or even a keel plank). At the western end of the wreck, the eroded ends of a number of planks are visible, at least two of these are butted against each other, close to the centreline of the wreck. The plank ends of the wreck are very vulnerable to damage, and some are starting to split off. A nail hole (c.20mm) was found in one plank. The ship could possibly have been in the 40-60 ton range (a small merchant ship or a large fishing boat). Due to the style it is unlikely (but not impossible) that the wreck is earlier than the 15 century. {1} Wreck reported to Finds Liaison Officer at around TQ 023 010 (about 220 m from the site recorded above. The finder has some photographs of the boat, apparently 50 x 14.5 yds, which is now being covered by shingle again. No obvious feature in 2001 aerial photograph. {2}

WINDMILL (Post Medieval - 1700 AD to 1799 AD)

Evidence EXTANT BUILDING

Description and SourcesDescription

A mill is shown at Clymping on Budgeon's map of 1724 and on Andrew and Drury's map of 1777. The present structure therefore probably replaced an earlier building on the same site.^{1} The date 1799 is cut into one of the timbers in the body of the mill.^{2} A smock mill, the ground floor is of flint, with tarred weather-boarding above. Converted for a residence, it has not been used as a mill for fifty years (ie since c.1900). The sails and upper parts are now removed and no machinery survives. The remainder is incorporated into Mill House, now a school.^{3} Detailed description.^{4} Shown on OS Drawings as "Clymping W.mill" and tithe map as "House Mill Garden etc" (apportionment no 261). Shown on Epoch 1 & 2 mapping as "Windmill (flour)" and Epoch 3 & 4 as "Windmill (disused)".

SITE (Early Mesolithic to Post Medieval - 10000 BC to 1900 AD)

Description and Sources

Description

Worked flints including 93 flakes with a high proportion showing evidence of retouch and use - the majority were hard hammer struck and many were primary flakes; also several soft hammer flakes of probable mesolithic date - and a small mesolithic pick. This high concentration of worked flint merited further investigation: Test Pit 1 produced post-Medieval tile frags and a pottery handle, 2 oyster shells and 19 worked flints; Test Pit 2 produced post-Medieval glass & tile, a Medieval pottery sherd and 8 worked flints. Description and Sources

Description

Remains of wreck of craft, located on Littlehampton Beach in the inter-tidal zone, at approximately TQ 023010. In this position the manner of loss appears to have been stranding. The remains are of a wooden sailing vessel, with a possible mast visible. This type of vessel structure is likely to indicate a date of loss in the post-medieval period. The site was uncovered in the autumn of 2007.

Remains of wreck of craft, located on Littlehampton Beach in the inter-tidal zone, at approximately TQ 023010. In this position the manner of loss appears to have been stranding. The remains are of a wooden sailing vessel, with a possible mast visible. This type of vessel structure is likely to indicate a date of loss in the post-medieval period, which may be supported by the location of the vessel owing to coastal changes since circa 1600. The site was first noted circa 1994 and reported again in 2007; it is known to be regularly covered and uncovered by sand.

Location and description of wreck site:

Wreck uncovered on Littlehampton Beach following storms in the autumn of 2007, but recorded earlier by another finder. Dimensions of the site said to have been 50 yards x 14.5 yards, with the tips of the ribs and one of the end posts visible. Examination of photographs enclosed with e-mail confirmed that the ribs were visible with the possible outline of a fallen mast orientated to the south-west.

The vessel was orientated bows NNW, stern SSE, and clearly in the inter-tidal zone.

First seen by this finder about 1994, but the wreck was then covered again, although the sand covering, when it exists, is rarely deep.

Two further visits by finder:

25-DEC-2007: underwater but starboard ribs proud of the sands.

21-FEB-2008: site dry, but covered by sand and silt, to at least 10 inches; digging away to a depth of 10 inches uncovered the top of one of the starboard ribs.

The ribs and mast indicate that this is the remains of a wooden sailing vessel, suggesting that the vessel is most likely to be of post-medieval date, but an earlier or a later date cannot be ruled out.

In this position the manner of loss would have been by stranding.

The area where the wreck lies was probably at or inland from the shoreline circa 1600, although this would require specific further study. {2} {3}
