Importance: High

Dear Anita & Martyn

It has come to my attention that IDL have submitted the above application which contains information originally produced by DGC Historic Building Consultants Limited and protected under copyright. The document has been rebranded with IDL's logo and confirms that it is an update to a report prepared by others however it states that the information was simply a catalogue of the architectural elements within the building and that the report highlights any changes in blue since the initial issue whilst the remainder of the items are unchanged.

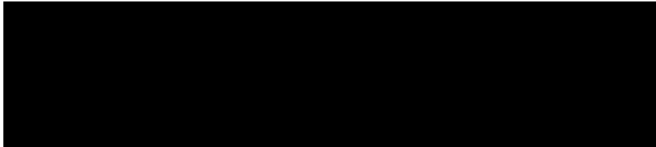

However, having scrutinised the content I believe that in addition to the blue text, two further columns have been altered without my knowledge or consent. These are Photographic Reference and Assessment of Impact.

Whilst the reference to photographs may be purely informative, I do not have access to these photographs and as such have no knowledge of their content., however the alterations to the Assessment of Impact do in my professional opinion alter the context and conservation ethos of my original statements.

These alterations were done without my knowledge or consent and I am currently seeking legal advice as my documents clearly identify that they are protected under copyright.

I am therefore writing to formally object to the misrepresentation of the text contained within the Schedule of Works and to absolutely testify that DGC Historic Buildings Consultants Limited are not involved with the project and as such have not consented to any of the alterations contained within the document now identified as IDL: Climping Mill House, Assessment of Significance – IDL Update Rev 01 – 2019.10.25

Kind Regards
