Tree Survey:

An inspection of the London Plane tree (T1), located on the verge, has revealed that the tree is currently in fine physiological condition. This specimen stands out as a highly prominent feature within the street scene due to its locality.

However, it is evident that the tree has been subject to some neglect over time, with the exception of previous works to clear phone lines. As a result, remedial pruning is now required to address a number of existing issues that may be affecting the tree's health, structural integrity, and overall safety.

Ongoing management will be essential for this tree. It is recommended that careful remedial pruning is undertaken and that the tree continues to receive attentive management throughout the remainder of its lifespan to ensure its continued health, safety, and the amenity contribution it provides to the local landscape.

Yours sincerely

Chris Matthews
