Sir,

Do we really need another 480 homes you are taking all countryside away just to satisfy yourselves and the money, it is gradually becoming a concrete jungle, the roads are gradually becoming congested and the maintenance of them is practically a joke it's becoming a patchwork quilt a blob of tarmac here and there.

What are you going to do about extra schools and DOCTORS SURGERIES which they cannot cope now. Have you ever considered planning building everything looks good on a piece of paper but when it comes to actually put it into practice it is something entirely different.

You tried this all before about 15-20 years ago and you failed then here is hoping enough people go against again we cannot cope with all this destroying of greenery our roads are unable to cope with all this extra traffic and our schools cannot keep cramming in extra pupils without destroying there education, NO EXTRA SURGERIES this planning has NOT been thought out at all.

I suggest you and your builders think this through properly not looking a green field and thinking that looks good I am sure there is plenty of open space in Arundel try building homes to relieve us of the pressure you are putting in this area.

Your Sincerely

J Davis
