

Dear Mrs Jackson

On inspecting the tree I found that the right hand stem of the twin stemmed Sycamore tree is totally dead and also some smaller branches.

As the tree is situated in the back garden where your young children play I feel that these branches should be removed as soon as possible to once again make it safe so the garden can be used to its full potential.

I could not find any fungi or damage to indicate the cause as to why these branches have died, but once they have been removed I will do regular checks with your permission to make sure any more dying branches are reported and dealt with accordingly.

Many thanks
Robert Dorey
