

This architectural elevation drawing depicts a multi-story building facade. The design is characterized by a grid-like arrangement of windows and doors. The upper portion of the facade features larger, multi-paned windows and doors, some of which are shaded with horizontal lines. Below this, there is a section with smaller, rectangular windows, some of which are filled with a stippled pattern. The lower portion of the facade shows a series of vertical elements, possibly columns or narrow windows, and a row of doors at the base. The drawing uses a combination of solid black, white, and gray tones, along with various line patterns (horizontal, vertical, stippled) to create depth and texture. The overall style is minimalist and modern.
