

Hello

I have several objections that I list for you in no specific order.

1. It is stated that it CANNOT be seen from the Green Lady Passage. That is incorrect. It can clearly be seen.

2. I do NOT understand the reason for such a trellis and bamboo planting. If the reason is for privacy and essentially to prevent me from seeing into their back garden from my flat roof patio I am afraid it does NOT succeed. I can easily still see into their garden (should I wish to) as the trellis does not prevent this and neither does the vegetation. I have already placed a screen across my balustrade which incidentally was in place before my neighbours purchased the property. What It does do is loom over my [REDACTED] only means of light to her kitchen by extending the already 6 feet 2 inches high brick wall that has been there since before we bought this property in 1993, by a further 3 feet . The actual support posts are, I feel, excessive by being 4" x 4". Hardly necessary for such a trellis. The whole structure looks quite out of place and honestly ridiculous looking like a complete "after thought". Our side of the wall is also lower than our neighbour's side making it higher and completely overwhelming from our side when walking from the house, down our side passage and into our garden. I cannot believe it is for security either. Also, I have an obscure glass in one of my windows and if, as I am planning to do, I change it for plain glass I will be able to see into their garden quite easily as can the neighbour at the bottom of their garden.

3. [REDACTED] Since we have lived in this property she has always sat at the kitchen table to eat her breakfast and read the newspaper. Obviously this is becoming more and more difficult for her and she needs the overhead electric light on plus a further direct light. She sits facing the window in order to get natural light as well and this is now being reduced significantly by this trellis with bamboo backing as it is approximately 3 feet from her window. [REDACTED]

When my neighbour bought the property late last year, my flat roof patio was exactly the same as it is now – nothing has changed. So if privacy was an issue – why buy it? It was put up one Thursday morning without even a mention of it to us – why would anyone do something like this that is going to have such an impact on the light and aesthetics of the property without even a single word of consultation to the adjoining neighbour – I do not understand. It is huge and extremely overpowering when walking next to it.

rational reason as I, being on the first floor can still easily see into their garden.

Please refuse the planning permission.
