

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1998. The public sector has also become an important employer of people with disabilities, with 1.5 million people with disabilities employed in the public sector in 1998, compared with 1.2 million in 1980.

There are a number of reasons why the public sector has become an important employer of people with disabilities. One reason is that the public sector has a long history of employing people with disabilities. In the 19th century, the public sector employed people with disabilities in a number of different roles, including as clerks, typists, and stenographers.

Another reason why the public sector has become an important employer of people with disabilities is that the public sector has a number of different departments and agencies, each of which has its own specific needs. This means that the public sector can employ people with disabilities in a wide range of roles, from clerical to professional.

Finally, the public sector has a number of different policies and procedures in place to support people with disabilities. This means that people with disabilities can find it easier to get a job in the public sector than in the private sector.

There are a number of challenges facing the public sector in the future. One challenge is that the public sector is facing a number of different pressures, including from the private sector and from the public. This means that the public sector will need to find ways to continue to employ people with disabilities in the future.

Another challenge is that the public sector is facing a number of different changes, including in the way it is organized and in the way it provides services. This means that the public sector will need to find ways to continue to employ people with disabilities in the future.

Finally, the public sector is facing a number of different opportunities. One opportunity is that the public sector is becoming more and more open to people with disabilities. This means that people with disabilities can find it easier to get a job in the public sector than in the private sector.

Another opportunity is that the public sector is becoming more and more aware of the needs of people with disabilities. This means that the public sector can find ways to continue to employ people with disabilities in the future.

Finally, the public sector is becoming more and more committed to the employment of people with disabilities. This means that the public sector can find ways to continue to employ people with disabilities in the future.

There are a number of ways in which the public sector can continue to employ people with disabilities in the future. One way is to continue to develop policies and procedures to support people with disabilities. Another way is to continue to provide training and support to people with disabilities.

Finally, the public sector can continue to work with the private sector and with the public to find ways to continue to employ people with disabilities in the future.

There are a number of ways in which the public sector can continue to employ people with disabilities in the future. One way is to continue to develop policies and procedures to support people with disabilities. Another way is to continue to provide training and support to people with disabilities.

Finally, the public sector can continue to work with the private sector and with the public to find ways to continue to employ people with disabilities in the future.

7001
Neil Crowther
Group Head of Planning

For details of how the Council will deal with your data please refer to our privacy notices on the website
<https://www.arun.gov.uk/privacy-policy/>

If you have provided an email address, all correspondence including the decision notice will be sent by email.
It is therefore important that you keep us informed if this changes during the course of this application.

