It is Permitted Development to house only the onsite workers required to fulfil that SEASON's work only (no others sites) for the duration of their season (no other nurseries season). Their season must fall within a ten month period. At the end of their season the caravans should be removed.

Permitted Development is there for a reason, to protect the environment and local residents. If an extension is required, then it simply can not come under permitted development rules and should require a full application for a seasonal workers caravan site hub.

We understand that it is not an automatic right to have this extended.

To waive it through would be in breach of the Permitted Development Law surely.

Their Intention is to occupy this site ten months of the year with workers from other sites and to expand on this. We know they are in the process of trying to acquire more land next to the site.

It should not be up to individuals to provide proof of what their intentions are, but for the applicant to provide proof to back up their claims, in order to prevent it from becoming a permanent caravan park (workers village!)

The default should be an automatic no, because this application is simply not permitted development, which I reiterate is there to protect the environment & local residents.
