I have lived my whole life in Pagham and travel 5 miles from pagham to Bognor every day for work and call it a blessing if I have no automotive close calls getting from A to B, the road is already dangerous let alone with the small population we have, people speed up and down regularly imagine how much worse this will be with more drivers. It's also disappointing to know the green fields I grew up with will end up as a housing estate. Or a road ? How many episodes of escape to the country will be left with no country to escape to ? A town with and infrastructure about to collapse cannot possibly benefit from another thousand or so houses, the line in Tesco is bad enough without the added populace. I understand that room must be made and these houses are a necessity, but on farmland that's beneficial to the support of the country and not to mention a flood plain, isn't there somewhere where building houses would be nothing but a gained venture rather then destroying farmland to cripple a town with a population it can't handle and land that's probably going to get flooded anyway.

Yours sincerely

If you want to know how busy the roads are in Pagham don't look at statistics come to Pagham and witness it first hand as we have to everyday , the roads are getting worse the traffic is getting more and more the roads can not cope with more influx of people and traffic ,more lorries ,large tractors day and night , we who live on Pagham road have already witnessed more accidents than we care to mention , on the 8th june this year a woman failed to stop at the church way junction narrowly missing a car coming the other way ,she drove into my house which is opposite church way junction and writing off my husbands car which was safely parked up my drive which I thought how wrong can you be ,it's a miracle no one was hurt . The countryside is a rare thing today , it used to be a treat for the people who lived in towns and cities like London but if we are now building more in the countryside we will have no countryside for the future generations to visit how sad is that ? No more farmland ,no more produce to feed the future generations , just more houses more traffic more flooding and more accidents not to mention more people to add to the mayhem which we deal with everyday at the moment .

Yours sincerely

Dear ASSISTANT DIRECTOR OF PLANNING AND ECONOMIC REGENERATION

It must be obvious , feelings are running high whatever we say it will make very little impact but we do feel that more houses in this area will cause havoc on the already packed roads .The . A 27 which the government have seen fit not to improve will only make matters worse causing more disruptions and longer queues during rush hour the access at church Barton house horns lane will only make it more unbearable with more queues , Of course this is only the tip of the iceberg With flooding nearly every week when it rains and coastal erosion just one of the few problems residents of Pagham have to face . more people , more traffic , more houses means more bad feeling to the already angered residents of our small village , the people who are making these decisions do not live here or have to live here so they do not care what happens in the long run bully for them ,Is farming not essential for these small rural farming communities who could supply produce much needed instead of more poxy houses , if you look up Pagham it is described as a coastal and rural village not a town but the government want to change our status from village to town perhaps we should rename it mini London . What is happening to Englands green and pleasant land ,we say no to more houses ,no to more traffic ,leave Pagham as it is a small village

Your sincerely
