Good morning Anita,

We are all disgusted at the way your department have ignored us and carried on with these "Windsong" plans despite our objections. What pray tell me is the point of asking for any objections when you people ignore them and carry on regardless. I know you all say "views don't count" but I would not mind betting that if one of you in the planning department had someone blocking the view from your house, things would a different story. We had a visit last week from the Hextons themselves trying to ingratiate themselves to us their future neighbours. When I brought up the subject of our sea view going, she just replied, "it's just one of those things". We are now going to have to put up with at least a year of dust, noise and disruption yet again all for a property none of us want built. This next period of months is going to very interesting with the parking restrictions we have put in place. We pay a lot of attention to this estate and everyone cares, so to have this upheaval again is going to cause a lot of resentment towards the Hextons which is a shame because the Thatchway has the friendliest neighbours so far and we all get along really well. Your department is a disgrace when it completely disregarded our objections which we all put in BEFORE the previous deadline with Zac Denton and recently yourself, again before your deadline.

P. Wyles.

Thanks Anita,

I cannot ask my neighbours to go through the business of objecting again but be assured, we will all be uncooperative with parking here in the Thatchway as we had enough problems the last time. If this Mr Hexton had been more understanding and met with us then this situation would not have arisen. Obviously the planning department have no consideration for those that have lived here for a number of years. We are all disgusted that our objections have been ignored as they where put through before the deadline earlier this year. The only difference to the plan this time is the glass screens on the rear balcony, the rear windows and the blocking of our view still stands as before so our concerns are still the same.

Regards,

Peter Wyles.

Dear My Wyles,

I acknowledge receipt of your e-mail which will be treated as a representation in respect of the current application R/119/20/PL. It will be scanned and uploaded within the next few days .

However, whilst the planning history of a site is a material planning consideration, I would advise that reference to comments made on previous applications will not be cross referenced and carried over as part of consideration of your comments. Each proposal is different and you should make comments separately in relation to each application highlighting your concerns in respect of the particular development proposed.

Regards

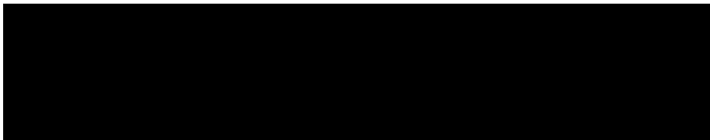

Anita Gardner

Dear Ms Gardner,

I am contacting you in relation to the above planning application of Windsong. My neighbours and I (Lynwood, Eagles and us at Foxwood) put our objections in long before the final objection date back in March to Zac Denton in your planning office. All our objections where ignored and permission for these works where granted soon after the final date.

If these works go ahead as planned we will have three windows at the rear looking into our gardens taking away our privacy, on top of this, we purchased Foxwood 20 years ago for the wonderful views of the sea which at the time was a huge USP. I wrote to Mr Hexton on behalf of our neighbours detailing our concerns and asked him if he would be kind enough to meet with us all and try to come to a different design of the roof. I received a arrogant reply saying "I go by the rule of law" and refused to meet with us. This is a very friendly area where we all get along brilliantly, and if any of us have works planned we consult each other to be sure of not causing any problems, so this does not appear to be someone who wants to "fit in" with his neighbours, quite the reverse it seems.

Our objections still stand and Mr Denton should still have them on file. This is causing great concerns with us all and to lose our view as well as our privacy is upsetting to say the least. Also, we had to endure over a year of builders vehicles blocking our driveways and parking in the no parking zone of the Thatchway during the works next to Windsong with many arguments with the drivers, and we do not intent to put up with this all over again.

Please look at our initial objections with the view of a solution. Mr Hexton obviously does not want to listen to our objections and seems to wish to ignore them for his own satisfaction and plans.

Yours faithfully

Mr Peter Wyles
