Dear Roger,
Can I assume your client proposes to use bare rooted plants of these sizes.

Anita

Dear Anita,

To stand the best chance of survival, the best plants are of the "bare-rooted" type about 450 - 600mm in height planted at about 350mm centres and will grow 300-400mm per annum subject to weather and soil conditions. Annual pruning at the top of up to 100mm - 150mm will produce a more dense growth at a lower levels and improve the general visual aspect of the mature hedge.

regards

Roger

Roger,
Thankyou for your prompt response. I don't need to know the anticipated plant heights. I need confirmation of the sizes when planted in order to ensure that they will fill the space adequately and stand a chance of establishing relatively quickly.
Thanks
Anita
