Smugglers Steps, The Street, Walberton

The boundary wall between the driveway of Smugglers Steps and the neighbouring property (Little Croft) was built sometime after Smugglers Steps original 17th Century construction. Since it's original construction the garage, to which it abuts (but is not connected to) was built and in more recent years the adjoining property (Little Croft) was constructed. The side wall of Little Croft runs parallel with the boundary wall set off by about 800mm.

The wall is constructed in random flintwork with a topping of a semi-circular brick capping at about 1.2m above ground level. The wall is raised in height in three steps up to a maximum height of about 2.1m towards the garage. The raised section above appears to have been constructed above the original wall partly in flint but mainly in brick and with the original semi-circular brick cappings on top.
