Dear Susan and Terry

Report on The Over Mature/Dying Goat Willow T1 – situated on the east boundary of your Front garden.

This is large for its species and sadly in rapid decline. The base of the tree is full of heart rot and visually being explored/habituated by wood wasps and similar.

My recommendations for works are as follows:

Due to the size of this tree and its location, best taken down on grounds of safety. The trunk can be left at around 1 meter in height for habitat.

I hope the above is of help. Sorry to be the bearer of bad news. If you require more details they will gladly be provided.

Yours sincerely

John Bentley ND Arb
