Dear Les, thank you for the report on the historic building recording exercise at the Lamb. A valuable record of a local landmark (and part of the social history of the area) which will survive after the building has gone. There is clearly an 18th century building at the core (although heavily disguised) and it is interesting to speculate whether it might have been listed had it remained a cottage and not subjected to endless adaption to serve the needs of the pub.

I am happy with the report subject to the suggested modifications to the figures showing the coloured phase plans that we discussed over the phone (and any final proof reading). I look forward to the next stage and the archaeological monitoring. (WSI already received and approved), Regards, mark taylor
