Dear Dennis

Caravel

I was sorry to hear about the problems you are having in keeping the business running from home, particularly as you've done so well in maintaining it through all the twists and turns the market has taken in recent years.

As requested, I write to confirm that it was in July of 1998 that I came to work for you. Before that you had worked with Jackie for several years – I remember her coming in to get me up to speed on the computer.

It's about 7 years since I left Caravel to work in the church office, so I was with you for about 3 years and in all that time you were on good terms with all your neighbours; there were never any complaints, in fact you used to put yourself out for other people and were always ready with a cheerful word. I really do hope these problems with your new neighbours can be ironed out quickly and easily – it's probably just because they don't know you very well!

Keep in touch.

All the best,
